

Functional Composites of Carbon Nanotubes and Applications, 2009: 193-213
ISBN: 978-81-7895-413-4 Editors: Kwang-Pill Lee, Anantha lyengar Gopalan and Fernand D.S. Marquis

8

Sorting and manipulating carbon nanotubes by chromatography for application

Hyunjung Lee*, Hye Jin Park, Kyung A Oh, Min Park, Soonho Lim and Junkyung Kim

Hybrid Materials Research Center, Korea Institute of Science and Technology, Seoul 136-791, Korea

Abstract

Carbon nanotubes (CNTs) are important materials with a unique combination of mechanical, electrical and thermal properties. For a practical application, they should be treated because as-prepared CNT are entangled and aggregated in general. Their size and size distribution are expected to be very important factor in determining the final

Correspondence/Reprint request: Dr. Hyunjung Lee, Hybrid Materials Research Center, Korea Institute of Science and Technology, Seoul 136-791, Korea. E-mail: lhj0630@kist.re.kr